2022-2023

THE WOMEN BEHIND THE STATISTICS
and the stories they tell

From the CEO

I don't know what is more exciting, to be completing a project or starting a new one. Our past year had a healthy dose of both.

WELCOMING EVA

Due to the generosity of our Anonymous Donor, who has been so instrumental in building our Mobile Mammography Program (funding three of the five mobile mammography coaches), we added 'Eva' to our fleet! Now booked almost solid for 2024, we are poised to serve more women in Southeast Texas than ever before!

PODCAST

Who would have thought The Rose would someday have a podcast of its own? We launched "Let's Talk About Your Breasts" in March and I remain astonished at the response we've had to the program—the number of listeners continues to climb. Even Dr. Melillo and Dr. Raz have become regular stars on the show. Many thanks to our producer, Freddy Cruz, of radio fame, who approached us with this idea and continues to guide us. Hope you listen in: therose.org/podcast.

NEW IMPROVED SYSTEMS

Our new state of the art Radiology Information System is on its way. From scheduling to patient and physician portals, to streamlining reports, it promises to make a huge difference in patient access and service. We are at the beginning of this two-year initiative and are so thankful for the foundations who understood this need and made it possible.

WOMEN SERVED

Nationwide the number of women having routine annual mammograms has not reached pre-COVID levels. The same holds true at The Rose. We are proud of serving 38,000+ patients last year, but we are concerned that too many women are still delaying having their annual mammograms. You are the most influential person in your family and friends' lives. If you know of someone who hasn't kept up with their screening, it's time for us to be their voice of reason and encourage, cajole, remind, and drive them to that visit. It could be the most important action you take all year long.

DOROTHY GIBBONS
CEO & Co-Founder of The Rose

WELCOME MARIA BOYCE

We are excited to announce the election of Maria Wyckoff Boyce to

The Rose's Board of Directors. With her personal experience as a breast cancer survivor, Maria brings a unique perspective and unwavering passion to her new role. Maria is a partner at the law firm Hogan Lovells LLP and she has served on numerous nonprofit organization boards and committees in Houston and beyond, including Episcopal Health Foundation. She also volunteers through MD Anderson's MyCancerConnection program. Through her extensive nonprofit experience, Maria has honed her understanding of community needs and the importance of collaboration to drive positive change.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony was held to unveil our new state-of-the-art podcast studio, made possible by the Bill and Helen Crowder Foundation.

Season 2: Bigger, Better, Bolder!

In January, we celebrated the grand opening of our new, advanced podcast recording studio, marking a significant leap forward for the second season of our podcast series “Let’s Talk About Your Breasts.” This celebration featured a ribbon-cutting ceremony attended by board members, special guests, and staff, all gathering to honor the Bill and Helen Crowder Foundation for their generous contribution that made the state-of-the-art studio possible.

The studio was transformed from a stark, clinical setting to a vibrant, soundproofed, and warm environment. We are committed to providing a platform where the voices of patients, doctors, and supporters can be heard.

With hundreds of episodes, “Let’s Talk About Your Breasts” brings a different level of awareness, heartwarming stories, the challenges of breast cancer and the importance of being your own advocate.

No one tells the story of The Rose better than our patients, doctors and all those who support our mission.

Expecting Hope

BY: DOROTHY GIBBONS

I continue to be alarmed by the increasing number of young women we are diagnosing every year. Even more concerning is how many of them were pregnant or within five years of having a baby at the time of diagnosis.

Studies confirm there is a unique danger in postpartum breast cancers. Most focus on the risk of metastasis, cancer spreading to other organs, which is 50% higher among those diagnosed within five years of giving birth than those who had not given birth. One study revealed that in women 55 years and younger, breast cancer risk peaked about five years after they gave birth, with risk for mothers being 80% higher compared with women who did not give birth. Postpartum status may be a prognostic indicator in young women with breast cancer and should be routinely identified, as up to 45% of women 45 years or younger with breast cancer fall into this category and could be at increased risk for metastasis.

That's a lot of words for saying women who have given birth need to be aware of their risk of breast cancer.

Yes, some will argue women have enough to deal with just having a child. I agree. Yet, the reality is a lump cannot be ignored. Too many times it is dismissed as simply a result of changes in the breast. But it needs a definitive diagnosis and young women must insist on that extra step.

It is one thing to read the studies and see this fact confirmed in The Rose's statistics but quite another to witness this issue in real life. Of all the survivors I have interviewed for the Let's Talk About Your Breasts Podcast, nearly half were diagnosed within a few years of a child's birth. When I listen to their stories, the hardships they endured are incredible and their worry about not being alive to raise their children is a real concern. Recently, I was at an event talking with a community partner whose wife was diagnosed 25 years ago. He mentioned their daughter was two years old when she was diagnosed. Even 25 years ago, it was an issue!

Another reality is that if a woman is uninsured, another trip to the doctor or having a mammogram or ultrasound test is financially out of reach.

Courtney Breast Cancer Survivor

Oddly, the same cost factor often applies to the insured woman. Since she has an issue, her test will be considered diagnostic. This means the cost of it will most often go against her deductible and must be paid out of pocket. At some healthcare facilities, (not The Rose), testing can run as high as $3,000.

If she is under the age of 40, (the standard recommended age for mammography) many practitioners will think she is too young for a mammogram.

One thing we are certain about, no one is too young to have breast cancer.

A look at the youngest women diagnosed by The Rose over the past six years.

2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023
23	22	22	24	24	21

Only one of these women did not have children.

I believe there is a real need to raise awareness about the possible risk of developing breast cancer after childbirth. Advocacy for this awareness is part of our mission and commitment to the community.

In the face of cancer treatments, Courtney stands strong, embracing the roles of both a warrior in her health battle and a devoted mother to her two young children.

MEET COURTNEY

Courtney was only 36 years old when she was diagnosed with Invasive Ductal Carcinoma, the most common type of breast cancer. But Courtney's diagnosis wasn't so simple, because she was breastfeeding a toddler at home and was 23 weeks pregnant. Courtney was in a battle for her life, and for her unborn baby's life.

Care Beyond Houston

Five Mobile Mammography Coaches! Five! Who would have ever imagined that our Mobile Mammography Program would grow so much in six years and serve so many people?

Thank you to our Anonymous Donor who saw the need for breast cancer screening beyond Houston and shares our dream of access to care for all.

Hats off to those who take action to save lives, one mammogram at a time, mile after mile.

Did you know?

- 77% of all our mobile patients (insured and uninsured) report they would not have had their annual mammogram if our coach hadn't gone to their community. What would have been their outcome without The Rose?
- 31 of the 43 counties we serve either have one mammography facility or none. We are filling a critical gap in care in each of these counties.
- Every coach is capable of serving 15 - 24 patients per mobile day.
- The Mobile Mammography Program screens, on average, 9,000 women annually.
- Appointments and bookings are scheduled in advance, and the mobile coaches visit employers, clinics, schools, Federally Qualified Health Centers, nonprofits, and many other partner sites.
- Our coaches travel from Bay City to Tenaha and Giddings to Beaumont; a land mass about the size of the state of Indiana.

Facing Breast Cancer at 37

A bag of mulch led Ana to discover a lump in her breast — a turning point that unveiled her battle with Stage III Invasive Ductal Carcinoma at just 37 years old.

After playful teasing from her son about whether she was strong enough to carry a bag of mulch, she grabbed the bag and held it close to her chest, only to immediately feel pain in her breast. After putting the mulch down, she felt a lump, but dismissed it as a possible injury from attempting to carry such a heavy bag.

The following day, she felt the lump again, only this time she brought it to her husband's attention. Together, they decided that she needed to see a doctor.

Ana was only 37 years old when she was diagnosed with Stage III Invasive Ductal Carcinoma. She would need chemotherapy, radiation, and ultimately, a double mastectomy. Going through treatment for any patient is difficult, but during COVID, it meant learning her diagnosis and facing each doctor's appointment, every treatment, and hospital stay alone.

"My three boys are my reason for staying positive through the whole process," says Ana. "I had to keep going, for them."

Her family lifted her spirits throughout her journey, while The Rose helped Ana and her family by navigating them through the labyrinth of breast healthcare while she underwent costly treatment. Thanks to The Rose, Ana could focus on tackling breast cancer and her recovery, knowing that our team was available to assist every step of the way.

"I am so grateful to The Rose for leading me to the right resources, I'm so blessed," says Ana.

Describing finding her cancer as a "miracle," Ana is now an advocate for breast self-exams and regular mammograms.

"Check yourself because it can be a lifesaver," says Ana. "If it happened to me, it can happen to you. Mammograms save lives."

Ana shares a tender moment with her son, finding beauty in bravery. Her path to embracing baldness was paved with love, as her husband shaved his head first, standing by her in her fight against breast cancer.

Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Mona welcomed patients to the Southeast center all October long.

Emily Reis, Community Engagement Navigator, proudly shares who she wears pink for.

Thank you, Helen Perry, for donating fabulous pink polo shirts to our team!

October's Breast Cancer Awareness Month at

The Rose was filled with FUNdraising, 31 days of podcasts, special media appearances, and staff activities.

Everyone at The Rose took time out of their busy schedules to celebrate Breast Cancer Awareness Month and our patients. Our team dressed up for spirit days, decorated workspaces, and brought smiles to everyone we served.

More than 125 fundraisers were held by the community to benefit The Rose in October. We are grateful for the truly impressive number of creative and wonderful events all dedicated to helping The Rose increase access to care.

At The Rose, we believe that fundraisers do more than bring in funds. Community events cultivate an awareness of breast care in ways we would have never been able to, thanks to the network of women who go above and beyond to advocate for the best care possible for all patients.

We took pampering our patients to another level. Thanks to a generous contribution from Farouk Systems, Inc., The Rose provided more than 13,000 self-care items to patients, staff, and our partners. Shampoo, conditioner, thermal spray, anti-bacterial body mist, hand soap – there was something for everyone!

Check out all the fun at: therose.org/bcam
